

Eco-Healthy Child Care Classes

Research increasingly shows that the first years of a child's life are extremely important in shaping future health and development. Child care providers can make small changes that have a big impact on the children in their care. By reducing toxins, such as chemicals in certain cleaning products, plastics or weed killers, providers will help prevent illnesses like asthma, certain learning disabilities, and even some forms of cancer. Learn how to become an endorsed, Eco-Healthy Child Care provider at one of our upcoming classes:

Monroe-	Wednesday, January 15th
Wayne-	Monday, February 3rd
Monroe-	Thursday, February 27th
Livingston-	Thursday, March 12th
Monroe-	Saturday, April 26th
Monroe-	Thursday, June 12th

If you have questions or concerns about the class, contact Kate McARDle at k.mcardle@childcarecouncil.com or (585)654-4752.

Receive FREE Technical Assistance upon completion of the Eco-Healthy Child Care Class.

"We have learned so much about making our home environment safer for the children we care for. Having the Eco TA was really helpful. We have made many simple and affordable changes to our program." Child Care Provider, Rochester, NY.

Ann & Barry Benedict of Greece, NY, replacing old vinyl nap mats.

All attendees of our classes receive an eco-healthy related gift for their child care program. Classes are all a reduced cost; $20.00 per 2.5 hours of training.

Autism Spectrum Disorders

By Bethany Williams, Referral Specialist

Autism Spectrum Disorder is a developmental disability that currently affects 1 in 54 children in the United States (CDC, 2013).

Currently, the cause of Autism Spectrum Disorders is unknown but research continues to be ongoing. Autism usually begins in early childhood and lasts throughout a person’s life. Commonly, people with ASD have challenges with social, emotional and communication skills.

Some signs of Autism Spectrum Disorders in children include:

- Not playing “pretend” games
- Not looking at objects when another person points at them
- Have trouble relating to others or not have an interest in other people at all
- Avoids eye contact
- Has trouble understanding other people’s feelings
- May not like to be touched
- May not respond when others talk to them
- Repeat or echo words said to them
- Have trouble expressing their needs
- Engage in repetitive actions
- Have trouble adapting to changes in routine
- May have unusual reactions to the way things smell, taste, look, feel or sound.
- Lose skills they once had (loss of language skills)
- Have very high anxiety

As a child care provider, some tips for working with children who have Autism Spectrum Disorders include: Making sure directions are given step by step (verbally, visually), providing physical supports or prompts, emphasizing students strengths and interests, giving positive feedback when the child completes a task successfully, having consistent routines and schedules, and working together with the child’s parents and other support staff to develop a tailored plan for the child’s needs. Regular, ongoing communication with the parents is also important.

By Rose Shufelt, Infant Toddler Specialist

Half of all new babies cry and fuss more than two hours a day. Their prolonged crying often trigger exhaustion, stress, depression, and even child abuse. According to Dr. Harvey Karp, a renown pediatrician and child development expert, anyone can transform even the fussiest babies into the Happiest Baby on the Block! Dr. Karp's highly successful method is based on four revolutionary concepts:

1. The Fourth Trimester: How to re-create the womblike atmosphere a newborn baby yearns for....outside the womb.
2. The Calming Reflux: An "off switch" all babies are born with which quickly soothes fussing and crying.
3. The 5 S's: Five easy methods to turn on a baby's amazing calming reflex.
4. The Cuddle Cure: How to combine the 5 S's to calm even colicky babies.

I am excited to announce that I have joined thousands of Certified Happiest Baby educators in this innovative approach to teach techniques for quickly calming fussy babies and helping them sleep longer. Dr. Karp's landmark work reveals a treasure sought by anyone who has had or worked with a crying, fussy baby—the calming reflex—the virtual off-switch for a young babies crying. It solves the puzzle "What causes colic?" and more importantly answers the questions, "How can we sooth a baby's screams in minutes...or less?" Child Care Council is offering it's first Happiest Baby on the Block training session on May 28, 2014. I guarantee that you will be amazed at the extraordinary way this technique works. Seeing is believing!

Join me for this new, exciting class to learn Dr. Karp's techniques to sooth crying, fussy babies. Parents are welcome to join you. Please share this information with any parents you feel would benefit from this unique opportunity. Space is limited. Sign up early so you don't miss this wonderful training. See our course calendar or website for more details. You won't believe your eyes or ears!

Magic? A miracle? No, it's a reflex!™

Respiratory Syncytial Virus (RSV)

By Emily Leone RN, C-PNP Health Services Coordinator

Respiratory Syncytial Virus or RSV is a respiratory virus that infects the lungs and airways. Most people recover in 1-2 weeks without difficulty, but sometimes infections can be more serious in young infants and those with underlying heart or lung conditions. RSV is the most common cause of bronchiolitis (inflammation of the small airways in the lungs) and pneumonia.

The virus is most common in the winter and early spring with a contagious period of up to 4 weeks in young infants. Most children will have contracted RSV before their 2nd birthday and reinfection is common.

Children do not need to be routinely excluded for RSV infection unless the following conditions are met:

- The child has rapid or labored breathing or has signs of cyanosis (blue skin or lips). If you see these signs refer immediately to a health professional!
- The child is unable to participate or staff members determine the child's care needs will compromise their ability to meet the health and safety needs of the other children in the group.
- The child meets other exclusion criteria such as having a fever accompanied by behavior change or cough.

Children can be re-admitted to care when the exclusion criteria are resolved.

Children with RSV may wheeze like children with asthma, though inhaler medications are often not effective. The cough may be present for as long as 3 weeks with RSV.

Prevention of RSV is accomplished through excellent hand washing especially before eating or preparing food and after touching the mouth, nose, or eyes. The virus can live on surfaces for many hours and up to 30 minutes on the hands. Cough etiquette—using a facial tissue followed by hand-washing or coughing into your shoulder can prevent the spread of respiratory droplets that can contain the virus.

“A Man Who Took History in His Hands”

Thursday, December 5, 2013

Excerpts from the statement that President Obama delivered on the passing of former South African President leader Nelson Mandela, calling him “a man who took history in his hands and bent the arc of the moral universe toward justice:”

“Today we have lost one of the most influential, courageous, and profoundly good human beings that any of us will ever share time with on this earth. He has achieved more than could be expected of any man.”

“We will not likely see the likes of Nelson Mandela again,” the president said, “so it falls to us, as best we can, to forward the example that he set, and to never discount the difference that one person can make.”

SENATOR TED O'BRIEN,

55TH DISTRICT NEW YORK STATE SENATE:

ANY SURPLUS MUST GO TOWARDS

PROPERTY TAX RELIEF

ROCHESTER, N.Y. – Senator Ted O'Brien applauded recent comments by Governor Cuomo suggesting that a projected state budget surplus for next year be used to relieve the property tax burden on middle class families.

“Property tax relief for hardworking families is essential to revitalizing the upstate economy,” Senator O'Brien said. “I support the Governor's expressed commitment to using a budget surplus to reduce property taxes and look forward to working with him to make it more affordable for upstate residents to stay in their homes.”

Last week, the Governor commented that if the state continued to hold down spending, the budget could achieve a surplus in the following cycle. The excess funds could be directed toward property tax relief without requiring cuts to essential services.

Is Your Teen Ready to Babysit?

By Linda Lane, Legally Exempt Enrollment Specialist

A common question that we hear is, “at what age can my child start babysitting?” There is no NYS mandated answer to that question. Each child has a different readiness age. It is important to realize that readiness is not measured by age, rather is it a stage of development. It is a serious decision for a child to make. A child should enjoy younger children and have a good connection with children younger than themselves. They should also show signs at home such as finishing homework and chores on their own, helping out with making snacks and meals, and following house rules. This will show their maturity and responsibility levels. They must also be comfortable with being left alone for long period of times, especially in other people's homes.

Once they are alone with the children, they must be able to stay in control of her/himself and also be able to supervise the children. Can they soothe a crying infant or handle a temper tantrum from a toddler? Can they practice safe habits while babysitting?

They should also have a basic knowledge of first aid. This includes knowing how to remain calm and not panic in an emergency situation. They should know what to do in common situations such as bumps and bruises, scrapes and burns. It is important that they also know when to ask for help and when to call 911. Communication with adults is also an important part of the babysitting process. They must feel comfortable asking questions of the parents and establishing the rules of the house. He/she should also be able to advocate for him/herself. Setting a babysitting rate is an important part of the process as well. They are providing a service and should be compensated for that service. For many, this is their first job and it is an important step. Their decision should be taken seriously. When they accept the responsibility to babysit they are accepting the responsibility for a child's life.

Mindful Eating

By Kelli Archer, Registered Dietitian

The onset of a new year brings upon hope for many; whether it be a career, family, or personal goal—the birth of a new year has a resounding way of instilling hope and igniting newfound fire.

May I encourage you this year to incorporate a healthier relationship with food by practicing what is known as mindful eating. Mindful eating encompasses many facets, but simply stated, mindful eating is using internal hunger cues to guide your food choices and in a non-judgmental way, using all of your senses to enjoy food and the nourishment it provides your body. Try incorporating a few of the suggestions listed below and see the springboard effect it could have on you and your life.

Use your Brakes

A Four-Step Pausing Practice can aid in food temptations:

1. Stop what you are doing, take note of your body—head to toes.
2. Take three deep breaths.
3. Take note of your emotions. Are you actually hungry?—Or are you lonely, sad, angry, happy...?
4. Let your newly calmed self help guide you in your decision.

Self-Acceptance

When trying to change eating habits, use how healthy you feel as a measure of progress rather than the number on the scale. Congratulate yourself for all you accomplish, such as—days you exercise and listening to your belly when it tells you “you are full”.

Use Mindful Eating to Create Curious Kids

Curious kids are more interested in food and eating. Ask kids about their fullness before and during meals, keep meal time fun, let kids serve themselves, talk about shapes, colors and textures of food, and ask kids food trivia such as where the food comes from, how it grows, and why it is good for you.

Be good to yourself. Every day is a new day full of possibilities.

New for 2014!

Meet the Staff of Child Care Council

So we can all get to know each other a little better, each month we will be introducing one or two staff members and including a short bio, and photo.

We'll start with me! I am Jennifer Weykman. As a former child care provider and a parent of three, I have walked many a mile in your shoes. I was a registered family child care provider for 14 years before coming to work at the Child Care Council. Prior to that, I worked in several business environments doing everything from operating a switchboard to all data processing for a large manufacturing company. There were no PC's back then. Not even a mouse!

In July of 2000, I assumed a newly created position as the Wayne County Child Care Council Administrative Assistant. I have grown to have an even greater understanding of the needs of child care providers and parents looking for child care. I am here to assist you in any way I can. My motto: "If I can't give you the answer, I will find someone who can."

Along with a variety of duties at the Wayne County Branch Office, I am also the Editor of Caring Matters. I delight in bringing you news about the Council and monthly articles written by the talented and highly educated staff with whom I work. You can contact me by calling the Newark office at 315-331-5443.

Changes To Regulations Are Coming: Now, What Do I Have To Do To Be Ready?

By Jenn Mehlenbacher, Registrar

On May 1, 2014, the new and improved regulations will go into effect. As mentioned in last month's article, you can read the new regulations on the OCFS website.

It is important to begin now in getting ready to implement these changes. Begin talking to your parents about the updated regulations and how you plan to begin implementing them.

One of the changes found in the new regulations is in section 417.7/416.7 (u-x) which states clearly when television and electronic media may be used in your program.

In 417.7/416.7 (u) it states that "if television or other visual media is used, it must be part of a planned developmentally appropriate program with an educational, social, physical or other learning objective that includes identified goals and objectives. Television and other electronic media must not be used solely to occupy time."

It is important to begin planning for this transition. This means when utilizing the television, there must be a learning objective to support its use. For example, let's say you are planning to spend a week learning about butterflies. You read about them, then you go see them at Strong Museum, perhaps observe caterpillars build cocoons in your program during the week. Then you find a half hour television program or movie about them. You could watch this program or movie as part of your unit on butterflies because it has a learning objective and supports the butterfly theme the children have been learning about.

This may be a difficult transition for some providers and children who use the television for small amounts of time each day. However, if you start planning and transitioning now, when May 1st comes it will not be so difficult for either you or your children to implement the new regulations.

Our registrars and education specialists will be happy to help you in making this transition and brainstorming ideas for programming if needed.
